Imagine with me for a moment. It's Friday night, and you have invited the Harts and Smiths over for a barbeque. You have $60 worth of steaks on the grill and, about half way through the process. They already smell wonderful. Just as you settle into your deck chair with a cold beverage, Joe Smith looks over at you and asks the dreaded question... "Why is your grill shutting off"?

Oh No! Your steaks are half way done, and you just ran out of propane.

There is a couple of methods to avoid this particular sticky situation. One would be to keep multiple tanks of propane around. This works wonderfully, unless you are like me and forget to fill bottle A when it runs out and you put bottle B on. Some people also dislike having extra bottles full of propane sitting around, for obvious reasons. And you should never store your spare bottle near your grill or any other flame.

Your Second Choice is to get a natural gas grill from Jim's Water & Woods, Inc.

A Weber natural gas grill never runs out of fuel in the middle of a cookout. It is simply there waiting to be used. There are no annoying trips to the local propane filling station and no wrestling heavy propane bottles around. Does this sound good to you? Jim's Water & Woods, Inc., as you know is a five star Weber dealer. Unlike the larger home stores around we carry Weber's full line of grills. Our wide selection grills and knowledgeable sales staff makes Jim's the natural
